INTRODUCTION TO THE MAJOR

American Studies is an interdisciplinary major that provides undergraduates the opportunity to study American history, identity, culture, politics, and the built environment. The major offers intensive, individualized faculty advising and mentorship to help students tap into the enormous and varied resources of Berkeley to tackle the question of what is “American” about America. Our courses integrate subjects, methods, and materials from across campus, including the humanities, the social sciences, and the professional schools.

AMPLIFY YOUR MAJOR

- Take a student-run DeCal course like AMERSTD 98: Deconstructing America: Mythology and Hidden History.
- Explore America in the world through study abroad.
- Attend a California American Studies Association event.
- Apply for a Summer Undergraduate Research Fellowship to support your senior thesis.
- Challenge yourself with an American Studies honors seminar and experience individual research mentorship.

AREAS OF CONCENTRATION

American Studies majors develop individual areas of concentration that focus on specific issues relating to U.S. culture, politics, economy, environment, and media. Students are able to draw on a broad spectrum of fields of knowledge, including law, business, ecology, geography, political economy, public policy, architecture, performance, and ethnic, racial, and urban studies. Designed around the axes of “time,” “place,” and material culture, we teach students how to ask and answer scholarly questions and how to design and execute a capstone senior thesis project.

I loved having the flexibility of being able to take some of the best classes from some of the best professors and being able to apply a breadth of knowledge from different disciplines."

– Catherine Ladd, Class of 2018
